Susan Rosoff:

TWO RED-HEADED 19TH CENTURY BEAUTIES AND THE ARTISTS THEY INSPIRED

Throughout history, artists have been inspired by people in their lives who motivated them to create their best work. Their stories are not often told, but give insight to the artists' artistic processes and their lives. Beautiful red-headed Jo Hiffernan was an inspiration to James Abbott McNeill Whistler and Gustave Courbet. Another red-head, Elizabeth Siddal, was muse to Dante Gabriel Rossetti, John Everett Millais, and other pre-Raphaelite artists. Susan Rosoff, a Winter Park art historian who was Curator of Education at the Orlando Museum of Art, presents the story of two of the most important British muses and the brilliant artists they inspired.
