New! Red Tail Angels

Black Fighter Pilots in WW II

Sig Unander, Jr.

The first black pilots to see air combat blazed a trail of glory in the frozen skies over Europe in the darkest days of World War II. The legendary “Tuskegee Airmen” fought Nazi tyranny abroad, earning high honors for valor. Their competence and determination helped end segregation in the armed forces and foreshadowed the civil rights movement.

Learn how these young aviators, under iron-willed General Benjamin O. Davis, Jr. made an inspiring record and changed history. Author/historian Sig Unander brings their true story to life and reveals details of “Red Tail” pilots from the Northwest, including University of Oregon track star Robert Deiz, who shot down two German fighter planes.
